Water Cure Establishment.

The above institution is now open for the reception of Tatients. It is located about five miles from the city, on the Cathage pike, and but a tew rods from the Hamilton, Cincinnati and Dayton Railroad, in the roar and at the sime distance from the Maini Canal, in the front, rendering it easy of access to those desirons of enjoying the benefits of the Institution.

To the lover of nature, ew parts of the country can furnish a more pleasing variety of scenery than spreads itself before the traveller all, the way from Cincinnation the Cure. The enaute and art combine, tendering the view beautiful beyond description.

The new, latge, and beautiful Edifice displays the taste of the artist at a glance. The leatness and degrance of the interior, combined with the numerous attractions which present themselves to the invalid, cannot fail to render this Establishment a desirable one. The Halls are extensive, the Rooms spacious and inviting, where the invalid can range at pleasure, free from atmospheric influences, in inclement weather. The fled Rooms are well ventilated, and neathy furnished; the Eath Rooms are well ventilated, and neathy furnished; the Eath Rooms are ample and commodious, being convenient for the application of water, in every form. In connection with the Institution there is a Gymnasium Hall, seventy-five teet long, where patients will have an opportunity of restoring their muscular strength by healthful exercise. The Springs which furnish the water for this establishment, are clear, pure, soit and abundant; flowing from a gravelly bed, they send for the water both cold and delicious. The country and neighborhood are temarkable for healthfulness, purity of sir, and variety of scenery. All things combined, we cannot think of a more desirable place, for those seeking health, than this Institution.

Dr. Prase, having had much experience in the treatment of diseases focular to hor sex, and being every way qualified for so important a station, will take special charge of the femal

ay. From three to five dollars will be charged for the first xamination.

POETRY.

The Old School House. BY WINNIE WOODFERM.

My school desk!—it is many a year

Since in this little room I lingered o'er my tiresome task, And longed for moon to come, Or watched the lengthening shadows creep

Along the dusty floor,
And tried to catch one golden glean; Of sunlight through the door Here in this place I cut my name I fondly hoped 'twould last! Another hand has quite effaced

The records of the past ! But on the time worn window sill The very words remain, In which I strove to paint my love

For charming 'Mary Jane.' Methinks I see the fairy now, With curls of golden hue,
A mouth all dimpled into smiles,
And eyes of softest blue.
I have a sunny curl I stole

Of that same golden hair.

Is forty, fat and fair ! My schoolmates! they are scattered far, 'Oh, would I were a happy child'

His boyhood o'er again? Who has no memory in his heart Of some sweet Mary Jane!

HUMOROUS.

Make Yourself at Home.

Old Merry was a candidate for the office of Representative, in one of the counties of the Old Dominion, and was a man of wealth and had some considerable pretensions to the etiquette of the class of gentry known as the "Old Virginia gentleman"—in other words, he was a genuine F. F. V. He was not above the practice of those little attentions to the canaille, now so often stooped to by the candidate for office, especially in a close race. His neighbor-in-law, Billy Hodge, one of the electors of the county, was a plain old farmer, belonging, we suppose, by the rule of ratiocination, to the order of S. F. V. He was moreover, a man of horse sense, and hearing that his neighbor Merry horse sense, and hearing that his neighbor Merry had become a candidate for the Legislature, and being of different politics, he concluded to kill off his new-born courtesy, by putting it to the torture of a severe trial. Accordingly, choosing a day when he knew his friend Merry had several visiters at his house, he repaired thither, and halloed at the gate. This soon brought Mr. Merry, with your humble servant sort of a smile on his counterage.

er, asked him to take a seat on the piazza, where many of his male visiters were sitting. He bowed and scraped around him a good deal, hoping to gain good will, and make him a proselyte to his interest in the election, and insisted that he should make himself comfortable, just as he would at home.

Old Billy put on the most awkward appearance the possibly could, turned about a time or two, then took off his coat and sat down. The attention of Mr. Merry, as may be supposed, did not cease, and presently he asked his neighbor to take a drink of series which he did

'Thank'ee, said Mr. Hodge, 'I'm doing very well, only my shoes are a little uncomfortable, and so I believe I'll take 'em off,' and suiting the Mr. Merry looked a little astonished, but said nothing. Presently Mr. Hodge divested himself of his rump jacket, as he called it, at the same time observing:

'I hope I don't intrude, but it's so uncommon lot.'

'Not at all, not at all,' said Mr. Merry, 'I like to see my friends comfortable,' at the same time he inwardly consigned him to a place where he would lose his right to citizenship in this country. At length old Billy, apparently overcome with heat, stepped to the end of the piazza, and quietly divested himself of his breeches, observing at the same time. same time, 'Most allers take off my breeches when about the house, at home, in hot weather.'

The first hint Mr. Merry had of the move, was old Billy walking by him, fanning himself with the skirt [?] of his shirt. In a moment all the honors of the office of representative faded from his mind, and he seized Billy by the collar of his shirt, and gave him a kick which sent him at least part of the way home, throwing his shoes, breeches, coat and rump jacket after him. The next day the editor of the country paper got a letter declarng his withdrawal from the canvass by Mr. Merry.

OLD FOLKS AT HOME. The Buffalo Republic, gives the following description of a new negro melody composed py Fos-

"Old Folks at Home," the last negro melody, is "Old Folks at Home," the last negro melody, is on every body's tongue, and consequently in every body's mouth. Pianos and guitars groan with it, night and day; sentimental young ladies sing it; sentimental young gentlemen warble it in midnight serenades; volatile young 'bucks' hum it in the midst of their busines and pleasure; boatmen roar it out stentorially at all hours and all times; all the bands play it; amateur flute blowers—the greatest musical nuisances in the world—agonize over it every same moment; the street organs wind it out musical musances in the world—agonize over it every spare moment; the street organs grind it out at every corner; monkeys dance it very asiduously; all the 'singing stars' carol it on the theatrical boards, and at grand concerts; the chamber maid sweeps and dusts to the measured cadence of "Old Folks at Home;" the butcher's boy treats you to a strain or two of it as he hands you in the steaks for strain or two of it as he hands you in the steaks for dinner; the milk-man mixes it up strangely with his harsh ding-dong accompaniment of his tireless bells; the wayside begger dances it for a few coppers; the blind fiddler scrapes it off on his unrosined catgut; the song vender peddles it at a cent a copy at every corner; there is not a 'live darkey,' young or old, but can whistle, sing, dance and play it, and throw in 'Ben Bolt,' by way of 'seasoning;' indeed, at every hour, at every turn, you are forcibly impressed with the interesting fact, that—

"Way down upon de Swanee ribber, Par, far away, Dere's where my heart is turning ebber, Dere's where de old folks stay;" while the pathatic, we may add, the soul-stirring chorus, breaks upon your sympathetic ear, in the ollowing strain: "All de world am sad and dreary, Ebery where I roam, Oh! darkies how my heart grows weary,

Far from de old folks at home."

widow on the death of her husband, spoke in a very serious tone, remarking that he was "one of the few. "Such a jewel of a Christian, you cannot find his equal, you know." To which the sobbing fair one replied, with an almost broken heart: I don't know, but I'll try."

If Men of broken fortunes, whose prospects at home are clouded, who have nothing to lose but everything to gain by a change, and in this category should be included only those whose good names have gone in the wreck of their property, and who find their double adversity too great for endurance; such men should go to California. WIT IS CAPITAL .- "There's our Gershom," said

Mr. Shellon, "he must go off to the city to get his living by his wits." "Well, how did he make out?" asked a friend. "Ah!" said the old man, with a sigh, tapping his forehead significantly, "he failed for want of copital."
